PASSING NEW EXCLUSION LAW

FLEETS OF WORLD WILL BE HERE

With the opening of Pearl Harbor in 1912, two years from now, says an executive officer of the American Pacific fleet which left for San Francisco on Tuesday, Honolulu will be a port of call for the fleets of the world. Nations which have confined their fleet maneuvers to closer home, or at best plowed the Atlantic, will make the Pacific the principal arena of their peaceful activities, all for the reason that at Pearl Harbor they will be able to find a drydock for repairing in case of necessity or emergency.

"The friendly nations will be welcome to the use of Pearl Harbor," says the officer quoted, "and the probabilities are that the Pearl Harbor drydock will see a foreigner under repairs before ever an American needs to go in for fixing. A cruise of the Pacific is not now indulged in by European and other powers as it might be if there were a place for repairs in case of accident. Great Britain, Germany, France and other European countries will send their fleets for round-the-world cruises when Pearl Harbor is perfected as a naval base, who now hesitate to send vessels so far from a base of repair."

"Pearl Harbor is the greatest move toward the world's peace ever conceived."

SELLING STOCKS WITHOUT LICENSE

The attention of the Honolulu Stock & Bond Exchange has been called to the presence in the city of unlicensed brokers who are offering oil and mining stocks for sale without having gone through the little formality of taking out a license, as prescribed by law, to do business. It is pointed out that this is not only unfair to other brokers, who pay $102 a year in fees for the privilege of doing business, but places the public in a fine way to be misled.

"If they pay the license and become legitimate stock brokers," said one gentleman this morning, "we can have nothing to say, but certainly it is unfair that they should remain in the field without having paid for and received such license. Unlicensed brokers might easily become a menace too, for no track can be kept of their business. For instance, one of them has recently been offering a certain oil stock at 30 cents and warning people to buy early as little of this stock was to be had. Closely following this announcement, I received an offer from the coast of a large amount of the same stock at 14 cents. That illustrates what the community is up against in the matter of unlicensed brokers, offering stocks which are little known here."

A committee headed by William Williamson has the matter in hand for the Stock Exchange and will shortly make a report thereon, probably with some recommendation.

QUEEN REVOKES HER TRUST DEED

Notice is given elsewhere in this paper that Queen Liliuokalani, at Washington, on January 21, revoked the trust deed of her property given to W. O. Smith, C. P. Lauka and A. S. Cleghorn on December 2 last. No explanation of the why and wherefore are given, although it is hinted that Prince Kuhio has had something to do with it. Mr. Smith stated that while he had been apprised of the intention of the ex-queen he did not know the reason or purpose of the revocation, and Colonel Lauka seemed to be equally at sea.

EXCURSION FROM OTHER ISLANDS

The Inter-Island Steam Navigation Co., Ltd., will issue round trip tickets by the steamers Mauna Koa and Kinai to passengers from Hawaii, Maui and Kauai who wish to attend the Elks' Carnival and Floral Parade.

S. S. Mauna Kea will arrive at Honolulu regular time on Saturday February 19th. Returning will leave Honolulu on Wednesday February 23 at 9 a. m. (instead of Tuesday), arriving at Hilo about 6 a. m. Thursday morning in time to catch the morning train to the volcano.

S. S. Kinai will arrive at Honolulu regular time on Sunday morning February 20th. Returning will leave Honolulu on Tuesday night February 22nd at 10 o'clock.

Special excursion round trip tickets are being offered.

REALLY WONDERFUL BARGAINS. Note the remarkable price reductions in ladies wash suits at Sachs this week. These surprising figures told in Sachs' ad in this issue. Hurry! I'll be off after stock-taking before the show. Don't fail to visit Sachs'.

CHIEF JUSTICE HARTWELL ALSO IS FOR CURTIS BILL

Honolulu, Feb. 10, 1910. EDITOR STAR:—No opinion has been expressed by me informally or otherwise upon the power of the legislature to enact a prohibitory liquor law, although I have not tried to waive my constitutional right of guessing whether it will ever do so.

I do not hesitate to express my opinion that such a law would be of the greatest value to Hawaii, and that if enacted by Congress it would go further than anything else I can think of towards making Hawaii immune against government by commission.

If there are any who wish government by commission unless we demonstrate our utter incapacity to keep the territory clean and decent I do not know them. But I am aware that national considerations may lead Congress to guard against the danger of having the electorate controlled by a possibly hostile nationality, doing this either by making a military reservation of Oahu, or placing it under a commission of an army and a navy officer and a civilian appointee of the president. It does not require the gift of prophecy to say that this or something like this will be done whenever Congress thinks that the danger to which I refer is imminent, and that it will neither be hastened nor delayed by a federal prohibition of liquor.

Congress does not wish to govern Hawaii by a commission any more than we do. It saw fit in the Organic Act to declare "That the Constitution, and except as herein otherwise provided, all the laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the said Territory as elsewhere in the United States." When that clause was under discussion in the senate the question was asked whether the Constitution, if extended to Hawaii by act of congress, could ever be withdrawn, and no one answered. The power of Congress of exclusive jurisdiction "in all cases whatsoever" over

SAYS SHE WILL DIE IF SON GOES TO SEA

An aged Portuguese woman went weeping to Sheriff Jarrett this morning to get him to dissuade her seventeen-year-old son from going to sea.

She wept and placed her hand on what she claims is a diseased heart, declaring that said heart was weak and liable to kill her in the event of her boy leaving home.

The boy, on the contrary, appears of the type that would be better for an experience at sea. It will probably make a man of him. At least this was Jarrett's opinion and he tried to make the mother see it in that light.

The lad is determined to go to sea and says that if his mother sends him to Maui, as she plans, he will take the first ship away from there. Her alternative is to place him at work in the little home garden on Punchbowl, but his expanding consciousness yearns for romances over seas. He has already signed as a sailor aboard the ship Erskine M. Phelps, for New York, and if he goes out on her there is no doubt that he will get all the romance that is coming to him. He has received his advance note and drawn clothes from a local dealer, when he might just as well have taken them from the shops aboard the Phelps.

The police are endeavoring to convince the sorrowing mother that her boy had better be allowed to follow his impulse for the sea, for otherwise it seems he might land in the reform school where there are no masts to climb. The youth has no work and is opposed to working ashore. While it is not a matter for the police, altogether, it is but one of the cases wherein Sheriff Jarrett is appealed to for advice and sometimes the responsibility gets on his nerves. It is easier to decide, as he often does, between a quarrelling husband and wife, than between an anxious mother and a restless son.

PLEASED WITH BAR

"I like the way the Bar Association went about its work," Governor Frear said today with reference to the judgeship. "It showed great care in selecting candidates. The ballot was the proper mode of choice."
